

Call to register and submit abstracts for
ANZSEE 2019 Conference
Ecological Economics: Solutions Now and In the Future
24–26 November 2019 RMIT University, Melbourne

The urgency for ecological solutions mounts with every delay in addressing significant local to global environmental and social challenges. Developing appropriate approaches and techniques for rebalancing human–nature interaction are central to ecological economics and a viable future for humankind. The ANZSEE 2019 conference will debate the future of ecological economics and roles for ecological economics in our future.

Registrations are inexpensive and places limited so please register now:

<http://anzsee.org/register-for-anzsee-2019/>

We call for abstracts from paper and session presenters. Indicative topics follow.

- Ecological economics
- Sustainable urban, rural and regional futures
- Ecological limits and planetary boundaries
- Ecological ethics and worldviews
- First Nations and Indigenous economies
- Transformative technologies in a bounded world
- Embedding ecological economics into education systems
- Communicating ecological economics; influencing decision makers

Find full details of these themes at: <https://anzsee.org/call-for-papers/>

Please send abstracts (250 word limit) and bios (150-word limit) to Anitra Nelson — anitra.nelson@rmit.edu.au — by midnight Monday 29 April 2019. Include a short title and up to four keywords. We expect the selection process to be finalised around mid-May 2019.

Watch this space for more details about the conference: <http://anzsee.org>

Centre for
Urban Research