

Thriving through transformation

Local to global sustainability

2015 ANZSEE Biennial Conference

University of New England, Armidale NSW • 19 - 23 October 2015

Two free public events presented by the Australia and New Zealand Society for Ecological Economics as part of the 2015 ANZSEE Biennial Conference. Focusing on transformation to a sustainable human existence at all geographical scales, particularly local, regional and remote, but also national and global scales.

---

Food, Agriculture and Climate • Snow Barlow Arts Lecture Theatre 1 • Monday 19th October 5pm

Post lecture drinks supported by Sustainable Living Armidale • Booloominbah Lawns UNE 6pm

Snow is a UNE Rural Science graduate who has worked in climate change research, research funding and policy for more than 30 years. As a Chief Scientist within the Commonwealth Department of Primary Industries he was a member of the Australian Delegation to the Kyoto CC negotiations. Recently he has chaired the Expert Advisory Panel directing the Department's Carbon Farming Futures Climate Change RDE program, co-ordinated the Primary Industries Adaptation Research Network of NCCARF the Departments and directed the development of a Climate Change Research Strategy for Primary Industries. His current research investigates the Adaptation of the Australian Wine Industry to climate change.

---

Transformation Workshop UNE Business School • Friday 23rd October 9:30am - 2pm

Policy making and well-being in the sustainable growth era • videolinked via Southbank Campus, Griffith University, Brisbane. The economic origins of ultrasociality – some implications for adapting to climate change: Professor John Gowdy, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute Comment: Professor John Foster, University of Queensland + other speakers.

